Collection of Archives published by Franco Gucciardo

This Web site contains personal archives from various activities where Franco Gucciardo was a key element. The information collected (in image format) is from original and reliable sources, which support statements made in connection with activities and events displayed in this web site. The published material is in its original language (Italian, French or English). Also, its physical format is not altered: a sure way to maintain the integrity and reliability of the documents.

To provide a base and for better understanding of the archived material, the Community Development

Curriculum of Franco Gucciardo is made available.

You may wish to familiarize yourself with the time-line and with the summary of events described in the Curriculum before selecting and accessing the data presented in the pages of this Web site. The interactive time-line focuses primarily on the 1971 to 1976 years; it covers the more important initiatives. This site is work-in-progress while documents are collected and imaged. It offers to the public factual accounts that may change the common knowledge of past events that shaped the italo-canadian community of the 1970's and current beliefs.

A detailed chronology is made available on request. The 62-page manuscript is divided in 11 files for better document reproduction, easier access and faster downloads. Additional reference material is also made available for consultation.

These Web pages contain links to supporting documents in various formats: an important word or a name; a phrase describing an activity or initiative; statement sentences introducing complementary material.
